

BEST BLOOD MAKES
FILLY GREAT RACER

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Prior to the triumph of my Maid of Perth in the first running of the Lassie Stakes at Tanforan I wrote to this effect:

As my readers know, King Heather (sire of the "Maid") is a grandson of Domino and it is needless for me to say it is only the expected coming to pass when King Heather sends such a brilliant one as Maid of Perth to the races.

I have maintained my faith in King Heather all along despite the tendency in some quarters to belittle any thoroughbred that has a plentitude of Domino blood in his veins. The original plan was to have the Celt mare Antrim (dam of King Heather) mated with the Rock Sand horse Friar Rock, but late in the breeding season in order to get a foal she was sent to the court of Domino's famous son Disguise.

I go down in the records as breeder of King Heather, although I had nothing to do with his dam's visit to Wikiup Rancho following her retirement from the course to enter the breeding paddock. I purchased Antrim after she had been bred and owned her when the foal was dropped, so am accounted the breeder of the King. The procedure is a somewhat doubtful one, but has been followed for many years.

Antrim came of a long line of producing matrons and that was one of the main reasons for her purchase on the recommendation of a student of blood lines by the San Franciscan from whom I bought her. It would be hard to equal the record of Diamantina, dam of Antrim; Eonette, dam of Diamantina, and on back to the immortal Pocahontas, sixth dam of Antrim, in the production of high class runners. Each mare was a grand producer. Pocahontas, a non-winner, had her first foal at six years old; fifteen foals in all, among which were Stockwell (Emperor of Stallions), Rataplan, King Tom, The Knight of Kars, and other noted horses.

Here's something worth thinking about—at 25 years Pocahontas foaled Araucaria, dam of Wellingtonia, and lived to 33 years of age. Wellingtonia is sire of the dam of the St. Simon horse Childwick, and Childwick, it is worth noting, is grandsire of my promising stallion, Xenofol.

PRIZES FOR CHRISTMAS STORY
CONTEST SOON TO BE DISPLAYED

What does being a good sport mean?

Answer: "Willingness on our part to acknowledge merit in the product of the winner, even though we be the loser." And, boys and girls, we want the writers of the best stories to win, don't we?

The first judges, as was stated in a previous issue of The Record, will be your teachers. The final judges will be chosen from the Parent Teachers Associations of the public schools and our local Catholic Daughters of America, representing the parents of the parochial school pupils. The ten best from each school will be judged according to the rules of the contest. A first, second and third, and seven consolation prizes will be the rewards for your respective school.

The Record has selected all the articles for awards.

And now something more about the first prize. Each brief case has a lock and key. To make this gift more individual, The Record has arranged to have yours initialed for you. The second prize is to be a Parkette pen and pencil set. Next week The Record will tell you more about this award and what the writers of the third best stories are to receive.

A week from next Monday the prizes will be on display in your respective schools. So arrange and rearrange your story thoughts until they are satisfactory to Judge You. Be ready. When you see the rewards of merit, you'll want more than ever to be a winner, which can only be accomplished by doing your best.

WILL KNOW WHO'S WHO WITHIN 2 MONTHS

Within two months a decision of the court will be forthcoming in regard to who's who, and why, in the county engineer's office. For on Tuesday, counsel for U. S. Marshall, who is contesting the office with C. R. Scott, filed final papers in the California Appellate Court, San Francisco. The question of who is county engineer of San Mateo county now rests entirely with this court.

Mrs. Margaret S. Sayre is the founder of the "Minute Women of 1834," an organization which will fight against increased taxes. A main tenet of the organization is the preservation of the Constitution. She admitted her interest in her little farm in West Orange, N. J., first led to the study of tax problems after her tax bill soared.

Large Number Of Citizens Attended Regular Session Of City Council Monday Will Meet Next Monday.

At the regular meeting of the Daly City Council, Monday evening of this week all members reported present.

A petition requesting submission of the recently adopted "Bingo" ordinance was presented. The clerk stated the various sections of the petition contained 462 signatures. He certified that the required 10 per cent of the total number of votes cast in this city at the last general election were found to appear. The city attorney requested that action on the petition be deferred two weeks, as he has not been given time to examine into the sufficiency of the signatures offered. He stated that the filing of the papers is sufficient to hold up operation of the ordinance pending examination and final certification and action thereon by the council. The council concurred in the city attorney's request and laid the matter over to its next regular meeting, two weeks hence.

The California League of Municipalities asked the council to adopt an ordinance creating a "Special Gasoline Tax Improvement Fund."

A communication from operations of the Fat Boy Barbecue Cabins asked fixing of a 15 or 20 mile speed limit at School and Mission streets. Chief of Police Doyle was instructed to secure erection of the previous speed limit signs, removed by the State Highway Department workmen when

MAN FOUND DEAD
IN PARKED CAR

Rumors Of Foul Play Deemed Unfounded By Authorities

The body of Washington Clifton Morgan, 51, of 119 Grant avenue, Watsonville, was found in his parked car at the intersection of the Skyline boulevard and the Rockaway Beach road, Tuesday morning of this week, by Deputy Sheriff Winters of Salada Beach.

Death was due to shot gun wounds in the head and stomach, possibly self inflicted, authorities believe. A double barreled shot gun was found in the road near the death car.

The remains were removed to the W. C. Lasswell & Co. mortuary establishment and a search for relatives was begun by Deputy Coroner Luella D. Pepper.

On the person of the deceased were found papers containing five different addresses. From a check of these it was learned Morgan, a former corporal in Uncle Sam's army, had been employed as janitor in a Watsonville Theater until recently.

Late Tuesday afternoon the remains were identified by Morgan's estranged wife, Addie Morgan, 2137 Greenwich street, San Francisco. The funeral was conducted from Lasswell mortuary chapel. Interment took place in the National Cemetery at the Presidio in San Francisco.

NATIONS' AGREEMENTS
URGED AS BIG STEPBy J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

There is music in the affairs of men other factors besides reason enter into which one may take one's part in or which one may spoil—Plato.

With Europe in a turmoil it is probably too much to hope, at least right now, for any concerted effort in co-operation with President Roosevelt for bringing something approaching economic security in the whole world. It is the consensus of opinion among students of the muddled situation it is only co-operation along general lines in trade, commerce and finance that will make a success of the chief executive's heroic attempt to rally American economic life. The United States cannot accomplish much in an isolationist spirit; agreement on cardinal points must be had with leading nations of Europe.

One great advance would be for this country and England to adjust the relation of the dollar and the pound and hold it permanently at that relation.

It is suggested by H. G. Wells and other far-seeing students that international boards for specific ends, such as organizing credit controls into one system, could ultimately become the real directorate of the common affairs of mankind.

I'll admit it is extremely difficult to get action by any particular group of people from another group even though they have the same language and similar customs which have been handed down through the ages. An individual may be reasoned with, but when it comes to a nation many

The thought was expressed in clear fashion sometime ago by George Gissing, who said:

"Take a man by himself and there is generally some reason to be found in him, some disposition for good; mass him with his fellows in the social organism, and ten to one he becomes a blatant creature, without a thought of his own, ready for any evil to which contagion prompts him."

Drastic adjustments in British fiscal policies are under way on account of the Italian-Ethiopian mess. European nations are spending so much money on armaments, coupled with a dearth of export business, that gradually a good deal of the wealth of each country is going into the control of the government, especially in Germany, France and Italy. Also, there is not the least doubt Europe is preparing to take part in the present business expansion in the United States.

The Black Cock, on Wild Horse Creek, is one of the most promising of the properties that have come to life in the search for new gold producers in the Nelson district. Some time ago the mine produced high grade shipments, but until recently had been almost forgotten.

Thousands Of Visitors At Home Course From All Parts Of Country

Thousands of San Mateo County residents have heard Bing Crosby croon; now they will have the opportunity of seeing his prize stable perform at the Tanforan oval. Bing's stable moved in for the autumn meeting, and will be seen in several of the major events.

Tomorrow the Bay Bridge Exposition Handicap for three-year-olds and upward will be the third stake race of the meeting. The horses will travel a mile in this event and only noted stayers are expected to compete, but the reward for the best will be $2500. Next week Alameda County has its day at the races with the $2500 Alameda County Handicap for two-year-olds. Last week the Lassie stakes of $5000 for two-year-old fillies foaled in California, a tribute to San Mateo County's great fiesta, went to Maid of Perth from the Walnut Creek Stables of J. W. Marchbank.

More than 12,000 persons saw the Marchbank baby nose in to win the attractive purse. Tanforan, completely remodeled, in holiday attire and with its gay throng, presented one of the most colorful pictures known to California turfdom. More than $138,000 mutual play provided the crowning success of a great day.

During the past week Marchbank, directing owner, staged a Community Chest day during which more than $1000 was netted for San Francisco Charity.

Tanforan is attracting thousands of visitors daily to San Mateo County, and not only is it making the county the turf mecca of the West, but, according to county business men, is giving definite assurance of better times. Part of the Tanforan receipts go to make up the state fund which helps promote county fairs, such as San Mateo County's recent successful fiesta.

Instigator, surprise winner of the Industrial Handicap, will be seen in action again but will not, however, be the long price he was on opening day.

Dark Winter, stablemate of Azucar, is expected to make his first bow in the race and if the track should be muddy he will become a more formidable contender, as he is ranked one of the best soft track horses in the country.

Jane Withers Wins Hearts Of Audiences In Part Of Little Spitfire

Jane Withers, the kid who imitated a machine gun, told tales on Shirley Temple, tried to run her down with a doll carriage and proved herself a complete annoyance in "Bright Eyes," has the title role in Fox Film's latest comedy success, "Ginger," which will be shown at the Daly City Theater, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, October 20, 21 and 22.

Little Miss Withers sets a new style in comedy entertainment in "Ginger," which kept Hollywood and New York preview audiences in continual guffaws, and caused the prediction that the film is a great beginning for what looks like a great career.

When Jane, the little, independent, self-reliant product of Ninth Avenue, is taken into the Park Avenue home of the pampered Jackie Searl, there's a swell clash with a world of comedy. O. P. Heggie gives an outstanding performance as Jane's foster-uncle and Katherine Alexander and Walter King provided an unusual romance as Jackie Searl's parents.

On the same program, "Front Page Woman," with Bette Davis and George Brent.

SUPERVISORS GIVE FIVE THOUSAND QUIZ FUND

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors on Monday granted the requested five thousand dollars to carry on a grand jury investigation of gambling and crime in the county.

Also payment of a $290 claim from Harry W. Arnold for inspection of the Lobitos creek bridge, was voted and E. L. Norberg was given $685 to pay for drawings of plans and preparing specifications of additions to the courthouse and Community Hospital. Also $500 was voted towards the ground-breaking ceremony of the livestock exposition building.

Prior to the authorizing of these sums, various citizens in attendance at the meeting predicted dire calamities for the county for sundry reasons.

Vice president of the Peninsula Civic League, M. A. Haris, vehemently denounced appointment of the proposed WPA co-ordinator, claiming that this will mean an expenditure of $10,000 for work that could be done through county offices already established. During the course of his remarks, Mr. Haris intimated that there might be a taxpayers strike in the county, or perchance it might lead to the people demanding the annexation of the county to San Francisco.

Supervisor Al Witt of First Township, during a heated discussion on repairs of Lomita Park streets as requested by the Lomita Park Development Association, declared that in his opinion the county government faced a complete breakdown when orders of the supervisors are not carried out by various county officials employed to do so.

Last, but not least, to sound a pessimistic note at this supervisors session, was Chairman J. F. Cambiano of the building trades council, who warned the supervisors not to start any WPA projects until the wage schedule had been carefully studied, and a satisfactory agreement with organized labor agreed upon. Cambiano intimated that unless this was done, workers of this county might refuse to work and this might become a problem, as they would automatically be dropped from the relief roll.

WATCH THE CURVES

Hal turned toward Barry then and, hands deep in jacket pockets, watched her in gloomy detachment. It was as if his mind were possessed by a local anesthetic, numb and useless around the small clear conduit that led from his eyes to the springs of superficial action. Where had love, or whatever it was, gone? When would the acid of this shabby lesson in beauty eat through, searching out each crevice in his spread wounds like iodine, to sting them deep? Tomorrow, after he had left her at some Los Angeles hotel, with Crack? Or tonight, soon, when he was out of this room.

She and Crack married—bound, linked, moving together across the country, hiding their connection till Hal should make himself vulnerable as an abandoned poppy. Later he might think of all the details of his opening himself to her, with Crack somewhere near by, drowsing over "shy" secreted schemes that amused him. He might think of the smallest things he had said as well as of the enormous things he had asked her to bring to him. And thinking of those, and remembering her dark, hard, unstirring acquiescence here there would be a richness of pain at which to clench his teeth, in which to learn how arrogance is cut down.

"There!" Crack exclaimed, darting from the bureau. "Tell me what you think that. Tell me if that starts changin' your mind."

Hal took the telegram and read it. Under his father's name and office address the message ran: "Young man between twenty-five and thirty six feet hundred sixty-five pounds gray eyes brown hair gray flannel suit made by Selkirk in Oxford name Henry Ireland nickname Hal traveling from New York to Los Angeles in share expense auto stop claims he is your son account trouble which will explain after you wire Martin Crack at Grand Hotel Santa Monica boulevard Hollywood California if he is your son very important please reply quick—Martin Crack."

Hal pushed out his underlip carelessly, looked up at Crack, and handed the form back. "Why not say what the 'trouble' is? Save you another wire." "Listen, Ireland," said Crack, his dry cheeks colored, his eyes shining and white all around the irises, "you're a good sorta guy. I'm only human." That's it, Hal told himself with quick satisfaction: he's not human, any more than a little puff-headed viper in the dust is human. "I'd like to save you the trouble this is gonna make for you if—"

"Oh, shut up," said Hal, wonderfully keeping his voice in superficial contempt. "If you've got to talk about it any more, talk to her." It hurt much more sharply than he'd expected—to say that so negligently; and his voice was dull as he added, "I'm going."

He walked past Crack to the door, opened it, and as he passed it from one hand to the other behind his back, he looked at Barry again. Still hugging her legs, her head still partly bowed, her staring went on, hard and dark and sullen, into the corner of the room. A jet of anguish sprang molten from his dead sense of her inviolability.

"And this is all," he said in a slow, moderate voice. "Everything led here—to this."

She turned her head slowly, not raising it, and looked at him, her scorn dull and general, only incidentally for him. Then her eyes went back to their staring before she said, her voice frankly husky, "This is all."

Crack followed him out the door, was following him down the hall outside as Hal heard the key turn the lock behind him. So she was ready to move as soon as they left. To do what? he wondered. Read, go to sleep, take up her staring again? As if it mattered!

"Listen," said Crack, a perverted intimacy struggling in his voice, "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll—"

"You'll shut up," said Hal, and turned into his room, locking the door behind him lest he anticipate everything by throttling Crack's little life out of him there in the dark hall.

CHAPTER IX

Tuesday

When daylight began to heat the sky outside, Hal still lay awake and sweating on his bed, with only his coat off. He had meant not to doze, so that Crack, in the next room, shouldn't have a chance to send his telegram without Hal's knowing it.

He couldn't think of Barry except as he had last seen her—golden head a little bowed, staring over her satin knees into the corner. And though he kept putting the dark portrait from him, he found himself later regarding it again, intently, without knowing how it had come back, or why.

Then the light was broader over the wide street. He heard the creaking of Crack's bed next door, light steps, and then the running of water. Crack wouldn't send the telegram now before he found an open office somewhere. In Las Vegas probably, where—with luck—they would eat breakfast. With luck? What did so slight a thing as luck on the road matter? It didn't. But, yes, it did. There was Sister Anastasia and her serene, beautiful acceptance of sorrow. She counted most in this day, rather as if she had always counted most and Hal had not seen it for the glare and dazzle of his moonstroke.

Hal washed without refreshment and went down to unlock Rasputin.

He found the inside door to the deserved lunchroom open, so he bagged oranges for Mrs. Pulsipher, leaving a quarter in the dish where they'd been. And he sat on the running board eating one of them when Kerrigan came down, brown eyes bright in a combination of greeting and alertness for signs of news.

"Don't look as if you'd slept well," he said, his voice dubious in disappointment.

"Plenty," said Hal. "Wasn't as tired as I expected."

Hal watched him, tasting—still through that internal numbness—his rich affection for the quick, kind eye, the tough cheeks with their labyrinth of minute red veins, the straight lips with their implication of readiness and gusto. Then the Pulsiphers came out, not wholly awake but bustling in tandem already. Then came Crack, his bag in one hand, golf ball loose in the other; he pushed the ball nervously into his side pocket as he made his insecure good morning to Hal. And after him came Sister Anastasia and Barry. The cool peace of the nun's face was softly animated in the prospect of this last day between her and her brother, and Hal knew Barry hadn't told her anything. Barry, simply groomed as ever in her creaseless tailleur, gave him acknowledgment of nothing—noting. The defensive mistrust of the journey's start was in her brief look; no suggestion of a smile framed her curt good morning; even Doc's lead was held short, as if to keep him from friendliness.

Rasputin put behind him the hundred and thirty-odd miles to Las Vegas in less than two hours and a half. The telegraph office was across and down the street from the place where they stopped to breakfast. Hal saw Crack's careless looking for it, saw him find it and stand for an indecisive moment before starting toward it. Hal drank orange juice and wolfed a bowl of cereal at the counter; it was natural enough he should pay his bill and saunter out to the street when Crack returned.

In the telephone booth next door, he called the telegraph office, and putting a shade of flat slowness in his voice, he had the girl accept him promptly as the person who'd just handed in a telegram for Frederick Ireland, in New York. Hal said: "I'd like to make it clearer in that part where it says he 'claims he is your son account trouble which will explain after you wire . . . I want to say, 'Claims he is your son because asks credit for five hundred dollars to cover expenses including transportation to San Francisco stop.' After that it goes on the same: 'Wire Martin Crack, Grand Hotel' and what you've got there."

Hal went back with a certain small, grim elation to look at Rasputin's old gauge. Poor old Pop; free, honest anger for a little while wouldn't hurt him much, wouldn't be new to him; and his prompt denial of parenthood would give Hal more time in Los Angeles.

When his numbed mind began to respond to old disciplines, it might try to tell him that the idea of his—Hal Ireland's—taking the soft throat of another human being in his hands and extinguishing the life that breathed there—that it was fantastic, preposterous. Could reason attack this certainty that he would be alone with Crack, that he would find him in a room composed of the several shabby rooms in this journey, and close the door carefully behind him, and lock it, and be alone with him? Once there, in the cool possession of his faculties, could reason find him an alternative to—to—Would Crack, dead, still look old-fashioned and tidy, indolent and secret, sexless and immature, subtly and slyly hateful? If you beat a basking viper dead in the dust with a stick, it didn't look pitiable at all, surely.

Crack's silent presence behind did not oppress him; premonition was gone, gathered into the compactness of an item of memory. Now it was Crack who could be uneasy; it was

Hal who had the secrets. He felt it secret to himself—his certainty that they would finally be alone; and it must stay secret, immune from a personal fury that could give Crack formless warning of danger. For if Crack vanished, slipped indolently away with the sly, drowsing triumph returned to his eye, Hal was obsessed for the rest of his life by the thought of that unbeaten evil, alive somewhere, gloating, hating him.

Would he see Barry after that? Would he look at her and remember things? Perhaps, but it couldn't get into his mind now.

They stopped at a lonely station to be sure of gas, oil, and water. Later, an unassuming fingerpost pointed the way to Death valley, off to the right. Hal heard the flat echo of the name in him and wished dearly for relief from these long, long stretches of the baking road. There must be an end to it; there must be an end, too, of this dull inability of his to see Barry except as she had sat on the bed the last night, staring, everything between them sullenly dismissed.

California welcomed them officially at its agricultural quarantine station, where the luggage had to come down off the roof and be opened for an inspector. Dropping the bags to Kerrigan and Crack, Hal didn't resist the temptation which the last two offered. "That—" he said to Crack in a voice casual enough, but plainly audible; "that's Kerrigan's, and that's—when Crack reached for it—"that's your wife's." He knew Barry wouldn't turn; but Sister Anastasia and Kerrigan both looked up at him as if he had cursed, and he had to drop his eyes to hide deep self-disgust.

A cool mist drifted up the Cajon Pass to meet them; and lower down the smooth concrete turnings they had a vista of the square-laid streets of San Bernardino, the low California bungalows, and the ranks of feathery eucalyptus. Hal didn't care why it seemed exciting to be so near the end—the end of a journey which once he had thought would be all tedium and then resolved should be careless holiday. After it was over he might begin to know what had happened to him, but there was nothing exciting about that.

In the middle of Mrs. Pulsipher's statistics on the thyroid Hollywood ladies took to keep their figures, John broke into frustrated sounds. He snapped his fingers in a moment and said, "It-tit-tit-tit said that way—that way. It-tit-tit—"

Hal half turned toward John with a feeling near absolute tenderness for him and said: "These darn signs seem to point in any direction for Los Angeles. What place is this, d'you know?"

"Pasadena," said Crack warily. "You can run out to Hollywood this way if you want." And he added, the insinuation of his voice unsure of its own slyness, "Why'n't you drop—us off there on the way?"

"Do that," said Hal briskly. It awed him a little to think again what might happen if Crack used that "us" when they were alone.

Guiding Rasputin to Crack's directions, Hal made a final attempt to fancy how it would be—to put Barry's bag down on the sidewalk and leave her there with her husband. Something might move and give him a remembrance other than the fixed image of last night. It might be the last time he saw her. Some little thing should happen, must happen, to show him where he was.

But it was nothing. Hal, on the roof, heard the good-bys said below him and saw Barry go a little apart with Sister Anastasia, write something on a slip of paper and give it to the nun before she kissed her. Her blue eyes came slowly to his, the hostile, unremembering screens fixed against him. Perhaps she watched an instant longer than suited her negligence, but that was all. He knew she wouldn't speak; and he looked away first, bending over to take Doc's muzzle in his hand and shake it gently. "Bye, poodle," he said. And then he was watching the ingenious, unsurprising grace of her boy's stride take her away, beside the terrier's bright trotting.

And this might be the last he ever saw of her! Good G—d, why did that still mean nothing?

The room was nondescript and comfortable and Kerrigan, in shirt-sleeves by the window, swept his paper down when Hal came in, smiled a faintly disturbed welcome, and said, "Well, here we are. When d'you shove off for Santa Barbara?"

"In a while," said Hal. "She's seeing a priest who knows her brother—what's on his mind, how he is and all. You knew her brother was dying? He is. That's why she's in a rush, bless her good heart. She's going to call up when she's ready. When do you have to be on the job, Colonel?" he asked.

"The End of the Trail?" he said, his eyes barely livened for a moment. "No hurry. Any time this month."

Hal watched him consider an opening for what he had to say and carelessly thought to head it off with: "Colonel, if you got the chance to round out your collection of experience, how would you do your man in? Knife, I mean? Or gun? What?"

"Would depend," Kerrigan said cautiously. "Why?"

"Interest," said Hal. "Interest." A bad poke; try something else, quick.

FORTUNES IN GEMS CHANGE OWNERSHIP OVER CUPS OF TEA

When it was stated the other day that a scientist had discovered a process which enabled him to make synthetic diamonds, indistinguishable from the real ones, but very much cheaper, a great many people were alarmed.

Diamonds are a favorite investment, and those who possess them would suffer enormous losses if stones exactly the same could be made commercially. It is impossible to say exactly how much money would be involved, but the total would probably not be far short of $1,000,000,000.

Fortunately for the owners of jewels, however, tests of the "synthetic diamonds" by the experts of the London Chamber of Commerce have revealed important differences between the manufactured gems and the genuine article.

Business in diamonds is one of the best barometers of world trade. When diamonds boom it is a sign that there is general prosperity. When the demand for them falls off commerce generally is slowing down.

But no other form of "big business" is carried out in so modest a way. There is no palatial diamond exchange, housed in "marble halls." Instead, you have the marble-topped tables of a teashop, where men sit over twopenny cups of tea or coffee, discussing the prices of the "sparklers" that lie spilled among the bread-crumbs. That's how they do business in Hatton Garden, the center of the diamond trade.—London Answers.

Oscola a Favored Name

According to the new Columbia Encyclopedia, just issued by the Columbia Press, Oscola is the most popular Indian name for towns in the country. Arkansas, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska and Pennsylvania all have towns of that name, it is said.

Chillicothe is the next in popularity and is found in Illinois, Missouri, Ohio and Texas. Arkansas, Iowa and Virginia all have towns called Pocahontas. Tecumseh, Shenandoah and Montezuma are Indian town names found in three states.

Some of the odd names listed for towns are Wink, Texas; Sleepy Eye, Minn.; Social Circle, Ga.; Frostproof, Fla.; What Cheer, Iowa; Cle Elum, Wash., and Itta Bena, Miss.

WHY BAY TURNS YELLOW

La Jolla Bay, near San Diego, Calif., had this summer a visitation of "yellow water," unique in that region both because of the prominence of yellow and the extremely small size of the causative organism, says the Collecting Net, published in the interests of marine biological laboratories. No satisfactory identification of this organism has been obtained. Individuals had a length of only about six-thousandths of a millimeter. They had four flagella. The case was also remarkable on account of the entire absence of other plankton organisms during the period of its noted abundance, from about July 27 to August 7.

He Fled From Fame

(From Vancouver Sun)

Perhaps the most interesting thing about this man Lawrence of Arabia, who died a few months ago in England, was the fact that he turned down wealth and ran away from fame.

Here was a man who gave the twentieth century a unique flareback to the age of chivalry.

In a time when men in the mass seemed to be all that counted, he restored the worth of the line individual.

He took one little corner of a war in which machinery and swollen battalions were all-important and made it a oneman show.

And then, having done all this—having helped to remake the map of the world and written an epic of old-fashioned, knightly achievement—he voluntarily stepped out of the spotlight.

He dropped out of the service of the British colonial office and buried himself in the anonymity of an army enlisted man.

He wrote one of the most absorbingly interesting books of modern times and withdrew it from circulation after it had paid him expenses—although it might have made hundreds of thousands of dollars for him.

He retired to an obscure country cottage and—at a time when newspapers and magazines would gladly have paid him fabulous prices for anything he cared to write—put in four years translating the Odyssey.

Now a man who could do all that can be set down as a freak, if you wish; but a verdict like that doesn't begin to cover the ground.

What is apparent when you think the matter over is that this Lawrence somehow learned something about life and the rewards it can give a man which most of us never quite discover.

It is as if he had quietly told us that all the things we prize most highly—wealth, fame, high position, leisure and the acclaim of our fellows—do not, after all, amount to a pint of beans.

The things that make the difference between a good life and a failure lie deeper; they take place inside a man, deep in the recesses of his own heart and the outward, visible trappings are less than the dust.

This, to be sure, is not a new discovery.

Great men of all times and places have usually reached the same conclusion, have discovered that if a man can square matters between his own soul and the mysterious, God-given impulse that drives him forward, that is all that counts.

But the rest of us seldom get more than suspicion of it.

We want the outward, visible signs of success—even if these signs be no more than a fine home in the suburbs, or a 12-cylinder car, or our picture in the newspapers.

That, to us, is what makes victory complete—until a man like Lawrence comes along and tells us that we don't know what we're talking about.

A FEW TIMELY WARNINGS

1—Before attaching electric irons, vacuum cleaners, cooking utensils, or any other electrical devices to your lighting circuits, consult an electrician as to the ability of your wiring to withstand this additional load. Electric wiring systems are designed to carry only a certain load, and if overloaded may cause fires.

2—Never keep ashes in wooden receptacles or paper cartons, nor pile them against wooden boxes, barrels or partitions, either in the cellar or outside the house.

3—Do not allow combustible rubbish to accumulate in or about the house. Do not burn large quantities of paper or rubbish in an open fire place. Burn such materials in the stove or furnace; it does no harm there.

4—Beware of rags or cloths used in oiling floors or cleaning or polishing furniture. They may ignite spontaneously. Be sure to burn them after using, or store them in a metal container out of doors. Leaving them about for only a few hours, may mean a fire.

DAILY CITY CLUB OPENS SEASON WITH VICTORY

Davies Fans Sixteen In Pitchers' Battle—De Felippo And Carrasco Excel At Bat—Vasquez Shines With Spectacular Catch.

(By Al Gould)

The newly rejuvenated Daily City Tanforan nine opened the winter season with a well deserved victory over the strong Spanish Club nine at the Harrison diamond last Sunday afternoon.

The game was a pitchers' battle from start to finish, with Creighton Davies, local mound ace, coming out on top. Davies while erratic in the opening innings, with the able guidance of the experienced Volkman on the receiving end, settled down to business and went to work. The result of their efforts may readily be seen in the play by play report of the game.

De Felippo, the new center field guardian of fly balls and what have you, excelled with the willow and on the field. With this introductory much may be expected from this lad as the season gets under way.

Palmini, the hot corner guardian, is another lad who may be expected to bolster up the team strength with his fielding and batting power.

Johnny Vasquez, popular local shortstop, brought the fans and spectators to their feet when he went to short left field and leaped into the air while on the dead run to catch Bancho's drive over his shoulder for the most spectacular play of the game.

Di Maggio, youngest brother of the great Joe, showed his mastery art in stealing bases. Receiving two lives by virtue of being walked by Davies, young Di Maggio stole second and third on both occasions. Whenever this youngster is in the line-up, opposing managers may be warned to keep an eye on their players, for this boy may decide to carry the player along with him.

ACTIVITIES OF OLD GLORY AUXILIARY

(By E. Dorn, Pub. Chmn.)

On Thursday of last week the San Mateo-Santa Clara Counties Council met at Palo Alto. The guest of the evening was Sister Jennie Leffman, assistant staff officer, who was present to make her inspection of the council.

After a pleasant evening, refreshments were served by the members of Allan H. Nichols Auxiliary No. 69.

Old Glory Drill Team took part in the parade last Saturday at the Floral Fiesta at Bay Meadows.

Last Sunday the Post and Auxiliary motored to the Veteran's Home at Yountville to participate in the V. F. W. Day celebration.

After a picnic lunch the visiting veterans and uniformed bodies joined in a short parade terminating at the parade grounds, where the drum and bugle corps and drill teams entered into competitive drill.

The winning drill teams were Emeryville No. 1010 first prize; Watsonville, second, and Daly City, third.

Our team accepted an invitation to participate in the "Century of Commerce" parade, held Monday evening of this week in San Francisco.

After the parade the ladies attended the San Francisco County Council, which was entertaining the Alameda and San Mateo-Santa Clara Counties Council. At a late hour the visitors adjourned to the banquet hall to enjoy a dainty spread, with the hostess council.

The ways and means committee of Old Glory Auxiliary wishes to announce to friends and members that they will serve a dinner Friday evening, October 25, between 6 and 8 o'clock at the Masonic Hall.

PARKING ON INCLINE NEEDS PRECAUTION

A woman was run over and killed by her automobile recently. She had gone to a park for a rest and had parked the car on an incline. As she lay on the lawn, the car suddenly rolled won the slope and ran over her body. Her injuries were fatal.

Parking on an incline is dangerous if not done properly. Make sure that the hand brake is on, stop the engine and if the hill is steep, leave the car in low gear. Also crank the wheels sharply toward the curb or put a large stone in front of the wheel if there is no curb.

Remember that if your car starts rolling, it may cause death or injury to those who happen to be in its path.

CELEBRATION OF GOLDEN JUBILEE OF OLD CHURCH

In commemoration of fifty years' religious service to the people of Italian origin in San Francisco, the Salesian Fathers of the Italian Church of SS. Peter and Paul will celebrate their golden jubilee, Sunday, November 3.

A group of enthusiastic civic leaders, including Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, Giuseppe Renzetti, consul general of Italy; A. P. Giannini, Sylvester Andriano, Louis Ferrari, Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., L. M. Giannini and Dr. A. S. Musante, met Tuesday night with the Salesian Fathers in the parish house and pledged their support for the plans to celebrate the golden jubilee.

The towering, pointed spires of the Church of SS. Peter and Paul, which gladden the skyline of San Francisco, dominate the "Little Italy" of San Francisco.

In that edifice, one of the most magnificent on the Pacific coast, located on Filbert street, between Stockton and Powell streets, the Italians who departed the old for the "new country," and their children, come to worship. The church is the center not only of the religious life of these people but the nucleus of their social life.

Under the guidance of the Salesian Fathers, the Italian Church of SS. Peter and Paul lays particular stress on the work for which the order is noted, that of care and education of children.

Founded fifty years ago, the Italian Church of SS. Peter and Paul was the first Italian Catholic Church in the city. In 1897 Archbishop Riordan called the Salesian Fathers to come here from Italy to take charge of the church. Father Raffaele M. Piperni was the first Provincial of the order in San Francisco. He started the work among the children of the neighborhood. He established a Salesian Americanization school, a Salesian club for boys, which is among the most famous in America, a Salesian boys' band, and a library. The work as conducted by the Salesian Fathers has tended to keep the children off the streets.

The first parochial church to care exclusively for the Italian population of San Francisco, was erected by the late Father Carlo Frenchi, northeast of the corner of Dupont place (now Grant avenue) and Filbert street. The structure, of plain wood construction, was given the name of SS. Peter and Paul. In the great fire of 1906, the church, parish halls, play rooms, rectory and all parish property was destroyed. The present magnificent church replaced the loss of 1906 and was dedicated March 30, 1924.

BROADWAY FAVORITE TO SHOW AT CURRAN

San Francisco will recapture its past glory as an operetta capital Monday night, October 28, when J. J. Shubert, veteran Broadway producer, brings the beautiful Evelyn Laye to the Curran for a limited engagement of the Noel Coward operetta "Bitter Sweet."

Miss Laye, whose cameo-like beauty and thrillingly lovely voice have made her the toast of two continents, created the leading role in "Bitter Sweet" in New York and in it delighted Broadwayites for an entire year. Mr. Shubert has surrounded his star with a lavish production and a splendid cast of singers and players. The hauntingly lovely quality of the "Bitter Sweet" music is well known through radio and phonograph records, but the Shubert production will be the first of the operetta "in the flesh" in San Francisco.

The versatile Noel Coward, who wrote "Cavalcade," "Private Lives" and "Design for Living," is responsible for the melodies the lyrics and the story of "Bitter Sweet," which is not only his finest musical work but one of the favorites of all modern operettas. Among the unforgettable melodies of the piece are "I'll See You Again," "Tokay," "I Shall Love You Till I Die" and "What Is Love?"

The story, a hauntingly poignant mixture of gay and the tragic, covers a half-century of time, beginning in the fashionable London of today and "Flashing Back" to the England of 1875, the Vienna of 1880 and London of the "gay nineties."

In the prologue the Marchioness of Shayne, played by Miss Laye, is being consulted by a young girl on a problem which she herself has faced many years before—the problem of being engaged to one man and in love with another. As the Marchioness begins to tell the girl her own story the scenes flash back and we see that romance enacted in its varied settings. The prologue returns to modern times; the Marchioness finishes her story and the young girl makes her decision. The play ends with the Marchioness remembering her past and singing the appealingly lovely "I Shall Love You Till I Die."

The engagement will be a limited one and mail orders are now being filled at the Curran box office. "Bitter Sweet" will be the first of a series of operettas which Mr. Shubert plans to bring to the Curran during the winter season.

WHY FIRST RAINS BRING SKIDS UPON "GREASY" ROADS

Time of the early rains is here and motorists are or should be "skid conscious." They know that after the first few minutes of rain paved roads seem to become coated with a slippery film which soon washes away if the rain continues. But few motorists actually know what causes this "greasy" condition. The answer is given in the following statement by an expert.

Motorists may be more on their guard if they know just what happens to a highway right after rain begins. Here is the explanation:

Bottled cold creams, salad dressings and the like show that oil and water can be made to mix if a proper emulsifier is used. Fine dust or clay is just as good an emulsifier as soap or egg yolk. Surface slime on the highway is just another kind of emulsion.

During the long, dry months highways become coated with oil and grease from the thousands of cars and this material simply lies there and picks up dust from a dozen sources, including even ground rubber from the countless tires.

The result of this is a mixture which needs only a few drops of water and a vigorous churning to make a highly slippery emulsion. Luckily, this dangerous film mixes freely with more water, so that it rapidly becomes thinner and is finally all washed away. A few minutes of hard rain and the road surface is left clean and nearly as safe as a dry pavement.

Besides these first rain skids, the statement continues, motorists should be alert for other skidding hazards, such as the presence of fallen leaves on the roadway in some localities.

SOCIAL SERVICE HELPS RECREATION

San Franciscans who have jobs have given generously to the Community Chest in order that those in need and members of their families may receive the benefits of the social service work done by the 92 agencies of the Chest in 1935 it is stated.

"The fellow with a job, we have found, is generously willing to help pay the bill for worthwhile recreation, for care of the sick and aged. He is anxious to contribute to the Chest in order that those who are unemployed may receive the services of the Chest agencies which are so vital in times of unemployment," say the sponsors.

The Chest donation quota for each business establishment in the city is computed from the number of men and women employed by the firm. When the quota set is reached and each employee has signed a pledge to contribute to the chest, that firm is rated at 100 per cent. Not only have most establishments reached the 100 per cent rating—hundreds of them have far exceeded it.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, destroy all hopes of restoring regularity.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use a liquid laxative. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative they generally use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

IT'S NOT IN MANY CEREALS

Nothing anyone eats is more important than Vitamin B—the vitamin for keeping fit. Yet it isn't in many cereals, when cereals are supposed to be our best source of this food element.

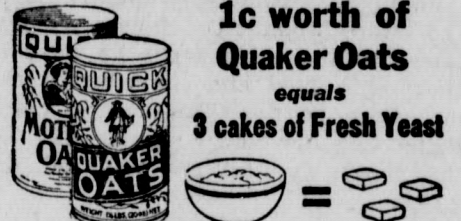

Many are nervous, poor in appetite, system out of order, because their daily diets lack enough of the precious Vitamin B for keeping fit.

Few things keep them back like a lack of this protective food element.

So give everyone Quaker Oats every morning. Because in addition to its generous supply of Vitamin B for keeping fit, it furnishes food-energy, muscle and body-building ingredients. For about 1/2c per dish.

Start serving it tomorrow for a 2-weeks test. Quaker Oats has a wholesome, nut-like, luscious appeal to the appetite. Flavors, surpassingly good. All grocers supply it.

OLD GLORY POST AND AUXILIARY HAS BUSY WEEK

(By Walter J. Lehigh)

During the past week, Old Glory Post and its Auxiliary drill team have participated in many events, the first of these being the parade at the San Mateo Floral Festival on Saturday last. Owing to track conditions probably caused by rains, no exhibition drill was held, much to the disappointment of the Auxiliary team. However, it was a successful affair and all who were not there missed a good show. Many first prizes were taken by local nurserymen and gardeners.

On Sunday last the trek to Yountville was on. Old Glory formed a caravan in Sausalito, 100 cars strong, and proceeded to advance on the Old Soldiers Home under the barrage of the Auxiliary drill team. The entire affair was colorful, especially the competition drill and parade. It must have been a tough job for the people who are appointed to judge the ladies drill teams. The uniforms were all so bright and colorful and the drilling so close, it surely took a keen eye to distinguish any minute errors that were made. The ladies of No. 2044, as usual, brought home a prize. The team and its leader, Comrade Collins, are deserving of a big hand in a big way and the Post feels very proud of them.

Then finally came Monday night, with a gigantic parade in San Francisco, in commemoration of the city's 100 years of progress. Everyone along the line the colors of Old Glory, together with the ladies drill team, received an enthusiastic welcome.

A coming event that is being looked forward to with eagerness is the institution and installation of the Junior Girls Corps. These youngsters already have many plans in mind for good times during the holidays.

Now that election of officers for the ensuing year is a thing of the past, the next thing on deck will be the installation of next year's leaders. Watch your Post paper for important dates and announcements.

LARGE NUMBER OF RACERS ARE ARRIVING DAILY

Many New Additions To Long List Are Stabled At Home Course

Three stables will be enroute to Tanforan within the next few days, according to latest advices received here. Bing Crosby, noted radio and screen star, has shipped ten head from Southern California. Mrs. W. T. Westrope is sending out seven fast thoroughbreds from Dallas, Texas. J. S. Riley is shipping his extensive stable here from Coney Island.

With more than one thousand thoroughbreds already in training and new strings checking in each week, Tanforan has the strongest array of horses which have campaigned here in recent years.

Cloud D'Or heads the Westrope string. This fast sprinter which raced on the coast last spring, has taken some of the best speedsters in the Chicago sector into camp this summer. Another clever member of the Westrope stable is the good 3-year-old filly, Vanita.

Jockey Jack Westrope, leading rider in 1933, may come west to ride his mother's horses. He has ridden in California before and is ranked as one of the best booters in racing today.

The Riley stable is a new one to the Pacific coast. The classy handicap horse, Born Happy; the clever sprinter Hi-Nelli and other good ones are in his string.

Bing Crosby has some useful, although not outstanding stars, in his stable. His rider, Apprentice Bill Martin, is already riding here daily.

The invading handicap stars will find plenty of opposition already on the grounds and in action. Among others, Azucar, winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, is in training now after a few days rest from his long trip out from Detroit. His first definite engagement is the Golden Gate Handicap, November 2, at a mile and a sixteenth. It is likely, however, that he will face the barrier in an overnight handicap or two prior to the Golden Gate.

SAN MATEO WOMAN WINS FIRST PRIZE

First prize of $500 in the San Mateo County Floral Fiesta queen contest drawing went to Mrs. E. B. Ranshouer, 111 Ninth avenue, San Mateo. The lucky number was 40423.

Second prize, ticket number 42747, won the sum of $200 and was held by Mrs. Gray of Burlingame. Third prize of $100, ticket number 2497, was held by R. Trunnell of San Carlos.

There were also four $25 prizes going to Lawrence Barrett, San Mateo A. Curran, Redwood City; J. Johnson, San Mateo, and Elmer's Floral Shop, Colma.

LEG BROKEN IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mrs. M. Kandler of San Francisco, who spent the past seven weeks in the St. Francis Hospital, is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Parker of Bellevue avenue. Mrs. Kandler was struck by an automobile recently and her leg was broken in two places. She has now fully recovered.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

George Mackay, an old-time prospector of Vancouver, is convinced that the property he has been working on for some years, has every possibility of developing into a producing mine.

In 1931, he located a group of claims on Jamieson Creek, some 17 miles northeast of Kamloops, in a heavily mineralized district, which has been favorably reported upon.

With the aid of his son and assistance of friends, he has done a remarkable amount of development work without the aid of machinery. He has sunk a prospecting shaft 27 feet, run three tunnels, 117, 107 and 18 feet long, besides open-cuts and stripping.

Samples of ore taken from the property have been assayed by G. S. Eldridge and P. W. Thomas, with results showing gold values per ton of .72 oz., .20, .09 and .86 oz., with silver values, 53.4 oz., 22.1, 6.4 and 121.7 oz. per ton. The ore also carries considerable galena and values run from $7.54 to $121.11 per ton. There is a strong vein on the property some 3 feet in width.

The claims are well located for shipping, being 9 miles from a railway, with a good highway right to the property.

Bralco Ltd., parent company of Bralorne Mines, Bridge River, and sponsor of other mining enterprises, has taken an option upon 750,000 shares of treasury stock of Wesko Gold Mines, operating the Centre Star mine, on Jubilee Mountain, Ymir, Nelson district.

Capital of the company is 2,500,000 shares, of which 1,710,000 shares have been issued, leaving 790,000 in the treasury. Of that number, 40,000 shares were already under option contract.

Directors of Bralco are Austin O. Taylor, Neil McQueen, W. W. Boulton and H. G. Fowler. The company for several years has kept engineers in the field in constant search for likely properties over a wide area on both sides of the international line.

Meridian Mining Company, Cambridge, Lardeau district, recovered 820 ozs. gold from 3888 tons milled during September, heads running .224 oz., or $7.84 per ton.

Mill ran 99.6 per cent of full time during the 30 days of the month, average mill duty being 129.6 tons per day. Tails ran .013 oz., total loss being 49.37 ozs. gold.

Tonnage handled was the largest in the history of the company and heads, while a trifle below those of August, show progressive improvement, having been as low as .116 oz. in June.

Kelowna and district is experiencing a real mining boom, the result of a mining deal of considerable importance to the Kelowna district, now being completed between the Canadian Collieries Ltd. of Blairmore, Alta., and Montreal, and Ely & Hall of Winfield, B. C., which will create considerable activity here.

The placer claims which were staked three years ago are located on Wrinkle Face Mountain, east of Winfield, on the line of the C. N. R., and about 3500 feet above sea level. The leases are on an old river bed and cover a wide area, are partly covered with volcanic lava which holds rare and valuable tertiary gravel in place.

WIFE DIES AND HUSBAND BURNED IN HOME FIRE

Alleged Drinking Party Blamed For Death Of Woman In Dwelling Blaze.

The grim reaper stalked into the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Dockan, in Lawndale, last Sunday evening when the couple indulged in their last liquor party with a friend named Wilson Abbott.

Violet Dockan, 48, was burned to death, and her husband, John Dockan, sustained what may prove fatal body burns, when a fire burst the stove in their home.

Dockan was taken to the South San Francisco Hospital for treatment.

Wilson Abbott, a friend, the third member of the party, who was visiting with the couple, escaped uninjured.

Dockan was later transferred to their Community Hospital.

The Colma fire department and the Chief of Police of Lawndale, Joe Cavalli made every effort to save the unfortunate victims.

The Dockans made their home in a shack owned by a cement construction company, which was completely devoured by the flames.

SCHOOL FLOAT IN COUNTY FLORAL FIESTA PARADE

Jefferson Elementary District Has One Of Most Elaborate In Line Of March.

The San Mateo County Floral Fiesta held at Bay Meadows last week end must have been voted a grand success by the participants, as well as the thousands of spectators who came to see and stayed to marvel at the wonders of this county's productions.

Contributing to the success of the Fiesta was the colorful parade of floats which passed before the grandstand, and outstanding among them was the float from the Jefferson School District. Tumbling in profuse abundance from two great "Horns of Plenty" were every variety of Colma grown vegetables—huge cauliflowers, cabbages, carrots, beets, turnips, squash, all generously donated by the ranchers of Colma and collected by the children of Jefferson and Thornton Schools. Flowers, equally abundant, covered both "Horns" and added a wealth of color and beauty to the float, proclaimed by bright letters along its side to be from the Jefferson School District.

To the ranchers and nurserymen of Colma who gave so freely of both flowers and vegetables, to the boys and girls who were responsible for their collection and delivery, to the cemetery superintendents from whom over one hundred palm branches were procured, to the seventh and eighth grade boys and girls who gave so cheerfully of their time and labor in building the float and finally to Mr. Peter Matra of Bay Meadows Nursery for his supervision and kind assistance, without whose generous aid the float would not have been the success it was—to all of these is due the gratitude of the entire district. The float was truly emblematic of the spirit of the community from which it came—the spirit of co-operation.
